Trauma—Impact on self, family, community, health professionals and support staff

Trauma can be a deeply distressing and / or disturbing experience. Trauma can be experienced in the form of child & adult abuse, neglect, cruelty. Trauma can be experienced through some other major event such as a car accident, spending long periods in hospital away from family, experiencing a natural disaster such as flooding or bush fire. Research has clearly shown that Transgenerational Trauma is a reality and deeply affecting for those where trauma has been passed through the generations.

Trauma leaves stories in the body (body memories), in the brain (neuro pathway development, limbic system arousal) and in other body symptoms that despite intensive investigations shows no specific origin.

Trauma impacts individuals in different ways and for some individuals they can experience Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. Contemporary research also reports the co-morbid cost of childhood trauma – especially sexual abuse, neglect and cruelty which can result in the development of major mental illnesses and medical problems including cardiac, gastro intestinal and diabetes.

Working with individuals who are experiencing the short or long term impact of trauma can have a significant impact on clinicians, support workers, family members and colleagues. It can be easy to be drawn into the lived experience of an individual who has / is experiencing trauma. When professional boundaries are not in place, the risk of this occurring increases. Being drawn into the trauma psychologically, emotionally, physically can result in the experience of compassion fatigue and / or vicarious trauma. Both of which can have a negative impact on the other.

During this workshop Dr McIntosh PhD will use a gentle and tender experiential approach enabling participants to learn about trauma and the impact on individuals – whilst developing strategies for self care in the learning created.

Comments from prior participants:

“I just wanted to say thank you for running this course, it was absolutely fabulous. I've been in my profession for 26 years and it's such a pleasure to engage with something a little bit different. I recognise that Wendy's style of teaching and engaging is also a little bit different but I found it fresh, challenging and have taken things away with me. It was worth every penny. Thank you also for the links to webinars which I will be taking a look at - I'm hooked!thought-evoking”.
